I missed one night, but the next I went;
   It was gusty above, and clear;
She was there, with the look of one ill-content,
   And said: “Do not come near!”

— “I am sorry last night to have failed you here,
   And now I have travelled all day;
And it’s long rowing back to the West-Hoe Pier,
   So brief must be my stay.”

— “O man of mystery, why not say
   Out plain to me all you mean?
Why you missed last night, and must now away
   Is — another has come between!”

— “O woman so mocking in mood and mien,
   So be it!” I replied:
“And if I am due at a differing scene
   Before the dark has died,

“Tis that, unresting, to wander wide
   Has ever been my plight,
And at least I have met you at Cremyll side
   If not last eve, to-night.”

— “You get small rest — that read I quite;
   And so do I, maybe;
Though there’s a rest hid safe from sight
   Elsewhere awaiting me!”

A mad star crossed the sky to the sea,
   Wasting in sparks as it streamed,
And when I looked back at her wistfully
   She had changed, much changed, it seemed.
The sparks of the star in her pupils gleamed,
   She was vague as a vapour now,
And ere of its meaning I had dreamed
   She’d vanished — I knew not how.

I stood on, long; each cliff-top bough,
   Like a cynic nodding there,
Moved up and down, though no man’s brow
   But mine met the wayward air.

Still stood I, wholly unaware
   Of what had come to pass,
Or had brought the secret of my new Fair
   To my old Love, alas!

I went down then by crag and grass
   To the boat wherein I had come.
Said the man with the oars: “This news of the lass
   Of Edgcumbe, is sharp for some!

“Yes: found this daybreak, stiff and numb
   On the shore here, whither she’d sped
To meet her lover last night in the glum,
   And he came not, ’tis said.

“And she leapt down, heart-hit.  Pity she’s dead:
   So much for the faithful-bent!” . . .
I looked, and again a star overhead
   Shot through the firmament.
