

Thomas Hardy (1840-1928)

30 The Supplanter

A Talk

I

He bends his travel-tarnished feet
    To where she wastes in clay:
From day-dawn until eve he fares
    Along the wintry way;
From day-dawn until eve he bears 5
    A wreath of blooms and bay.

II

“Are these the gravestone shapes that meet
    My forward-straining view?
Or forms that cross a window-blind
    In circle, knot, and queue: 10
Gay forms, that cross and whirl and wind
    To music throbbing through?” —

III

“The Keeper of the Field of Tombs
    Dwells by its gateway-pier;
He celebrates with feast and dance 15
    His daughter’s twentieth year:
He celebrates with wine of France
    The birthday of his dear.” —

IV

“The gates are shut when evening glooms:
    Lay down your wreath, sad wight; 20
To-morrow is a time more fit
    For placing flowers aright:
The morning is the time for it;
    Come, wake with us to-night!” —

V

He drops his wreath, and enters in, 25
    And sits, and shares their cheer. —

“I fain would foot with you, young man,
    Before all others here;
I fain would foot it for a span
    With such a cavalier!” 30

VI

She coaxes, clasps, nor fails to win
    His first-unwilling hand:
The merry music strikes its staves,
    The dancers quickly band;
And with the Damsel of the Graves 35
    He duly takes his stand.

VII

“You dance divinely, stranger swain,
    Such grace I’ve never known.
O longer stay! Breathe not adieu
    And leave me here alone! 40
O longer stay: to her be true
    Whose heart is all your own!” —

VIII

“I mark a phantom through the pane,
    That beckons in despair,
Its mouth all drawn with heavy moan — 45
    Her to whom once I sware!” —
“Nay; ’tis the lately carven stone
    Of some strange girl laid there!” —

IX

“I see white flowers upon the floor
    Betrodden to a clot; 50
My wreath were they?” — “Nay; love me much,
    Swear you’ll forget me not!
’Twas but a wreath! Full many such
    Are brought here and forgot.”

. . . . .

X

The watches of the night grow hoar, 55
    He wakens with the sun;
“Now could I kill thee here!” he says,

“For winning me from one
Who ever in her living days
Was pure as cloistered nun!” 60

XI
She cowers; and, rising, roves he then
Afar for many a mile,
For evermore to be apart
From her who could beguile
His senses by her burning heart, 65
And win his love awhile.

XII
A year beholds him wend again
To her who wastes in clay;
From day-dawn until eve he fares
Along the wintry way, 70
From day-dawn until eve repairs
Towards her mound to pray.

XIII
And there he sets him to fulfil
His frustrate first intent:
And lay upon her bed, at last, 75
The offering earlier meant:
When, on his stooping figure, ghast
And haggard eyes are bent.

XIV
“O surely for a little while
You can be kind to me. 80
For do you love her, do you hate,
She knows not — cares not she:
Only the living feel the weight
Of loveless misery!

XV
“I own my sin; I’ve paid its cost, 85
Being outcast, shamed, and bare:
I give you daily my whole heart,
Your child my tender care,

I pour you prayers; this life apart
Is more than I can bear!" 90

XVI

He turns — unpitying, passion-tossed;
“I know you not!” he cries,
“Nor know your child. I knew this maid,
But she’s in Paradise!”
And he has vanished in the shade 95
From her beseeching eyes.
