John Payne (1842-1916)

1 The Ballad of Isobel

| I.                                     |     |
|--|-----|
| The day is dead, the night draws on,   |     |
| The shadows gather fast:               |     |
| Tis many an hour yet to the dawn,      |     |
| Till Hallow-tide be past.              |     |
|  |     |
| Till Hallow-tide be past and sped,     | 5   |
| The night is full of fear;             |     |
| For then, they say, the restless dead  |     |
| Unto the live draw near.               |     |
|  |     |
| Between the Saints' day and the Souls' | 1.0 |
| The dead wake in the mould;            | 10  |
| The poor dead, in their grassy knolls  |     |
| They lie and are a-cold.               |     |
| They think upon the live that sit      |     |
| And drink the Hallow-ale,              |     |
| Whilst they lie stark within the pit,  | 15  |
| Nailed down with many a nail.          |     |
| And sore they wonder if the thought    |     |
| Live in them of the dead;              |     |
| And sore with wish they are distraught |     |
| To feel the firelight red.             | 20  |
| To foot the firefight fea.             | 20  |
| Betwixt the day and yet the day        |     |
| The Saints and Souls divide,           |     |
| The dead folk rise out of the clay     |     |
| And wander far and wide.               |     |
| They wander o'er the sheeted snow,     | 25  |
| Chill with the frore of death,         | 20  |
| Until they see the windows glow        |     |
| With the fire's ruddy breath.          |     |
| ZII ZII Z Z Z Z Z Z Z Z Z Z Z Z        |     |

| And if the cottage door be fast        |    |
|--|----|
| And but the light win out,             | 30 |
| All night, until their hour is past,   |    |
| The dead walk thereabout.              |    |
|  |    |
| And all night long, the live folk hear |    |
| Their windy song of sighs              |    |
| And waken all for very fear,           | 35 |
| Until the white day rise.              |    |
|  |    |
| But if the folk be piteous             |    |
| And pity the poor dead                 |    |
| That weary in the narrow house,        |    |
| Upon the cold earth's bed,             | 40 |
|  |    |
| They pile the peats upon the fire      |    |
| And leave the door ajar,               |    |
| That so the rosy flame aspire          |    |
| To where the grey ghosts are.          |    |
| And syne they sweep the cottage floor  | 45 |
| And set the hearthside chair:          | 10 |
| The sad sprights watch beside the door |    |
| Till midnight still the air.           |    |
|  |    |
| And then toward the friendly glow      |    |
| Come trooping in the dead;             | 50 |
| Until the cocks for morning crow,      |    |
| They sit by the fire red.              |    |
|  |    |
| II.                                    |    |
| "Oh, I have wearied long enough!       |    |
| I'll weary me no more;                 |    |
| But I will watch for my dead love      | 55 |
| Till Hallow-tide be o'er."             |    |
| He set the door across the sill;       |    |
| The moonlight fluttered in;            |    |
| The sad snow covered heath and hill,   |    |
| As far as eye could win.               | 60 |
| The fair and of o ordina will.         | 00 |

| All dumb the white world lay;               |    |
|---|----|
| Night sat on it as cold and fair            |    |
| As death upon a may.                        |    |
|   |    |
| He turned him back into the room            | 65 |
| And sat him by the fire:                    |    |
| Night darkened round him in the gloom;      |    |
| The shadowtide rose higher.                 |    |
|   |    |
| He rose and looked out o'er the hill        |    |
| To where the grey kirk lay;                 | 70 |
| The midnight quiet was so still,            |    |
| He heard the bell-chimes play.              |    |
|   |    |
| Twelve times he heard the sweet bell chime; |    |
| No whit he stirred or spoke;                |    |
| But his eyes fixed, as if on Time           | 75 |
| The hour of judgment broke.                 |    |
|   |    |
| And as the last stroke fell and died,       |    |
| Over the kirkyard grey                      |    |
| Himseemed he saw a blue flame glide,        |    |
| Among the graves at play.                   | 80 |
|   |    |
| A flutter waved upon the breeze,            |    |
| As of a spirit's wings:                     |    |
| A wind went by him through the trees,       |    |
| That spoke of heavenly things.              |    |
|   |    |
| Himseemed he heard a sound of feet          | 85 |
| Upon the silver snow:                       |    |
| A rush of robes by him did fleet,           |    |
| A sighing soft and low.                     |    |
|   |    |
| He turned and sat him down again;           |    |
| The midnight filled the place:              | 90 |
| The tears ran down like silent rain         |    |
| Upon his weary face.                        |    |
|   |    |

The thin frost feathered in the air;

| "She will not come to me," he said;  "The death-swoon is too strong: She hath forgot me with the dead,                               | 95  |
|--|-----|
| Me that she loved so long.  "She will not come: she sleeps too sweet   |     |
| Within the quiet ground.  What worth is love, when life is fleet  And sleep in death so sound?                                       | 100 |
| "She will not come!" — A soft cold air Upon his forehead fell: He turned him to the empty chair;                                     |     |
| And there sat Isobel.  His dead love sat him side by side,   | 105 |
| His minnie white and wan: Within the tomb she could not bide, Whilst he sat weeping on.  |     |
| Ah, wasted, wasted was her face And sore her cheek was white; But in her eyes the ancient grace Burnt with a feeble light.           | 110 |
| Upon her breast the grave-wede grey Fell to her little feet; But still the golden tresses lay About her bosom sweet.                 | 115 |
| "Ah, how is't with ye, Isobel?  How pale ye look and cold!  Ah, sore it is to think ye dwell  Alone beneath the mould!               | 120 |
| "Is't weary for our love ye've grown From dwelling with the dead, Or shivering from the cold grave-stone To find the firelight red?" |     |
| "Oh, 'tis not that I'm lorn of love  | 125 |

Or that a-cold I lie:
I trust in God that is above
To bring you by-and-by.

| "I feel your kisses on my face, Your kisses sweet and warm: Your love is in the burial-place; I fear nor cold nor warm.   | 130 |
|---|-----|
| "I feel the love within your heart That beats for me alone:   |     |
| I fear not change upon your part Nor crave for the unknown.   | 135 |
| "For to the dead no faint fears cling: All certainty have they: They know (and smile at sorrowing) Love never dies away.  | 140 |
| "No harm can reach me in Death's deep: It hath no fear for me: God sweetens it to lie and sleep, Until His face I see:    |     |
| "He makes it sweet to lie and wait, Till we together meet And hand-in-hand athwart the gate Pass up the golden street.    | 145 |
| "But where's the babe that at my side Slept sweetly long ago? So sore to me to-night it cried, I could not choose but go. | 150 |
| "I heard its voice so full of wail, It woke me in the grave: Its sighs came to me on the gale, Across the wintry wave.    | 155 |

"For though death lap her wide and mild, A mother cannot rest,

| Except her little sucking child Be sleeping at her breast."   | 160 |
|---|-----|
| "Ah, know'st thou not, my love?" he said:  "Methought the dead knew all.  When in that night of doom and dread  The moving waters' wall |     |
| "Smote on our ship and drove it down Beneath the raging sea, All of our company did drown, Alas! save only me.                          | 165 |
| "And me the cruel billows cast Aswoon upon the strand; Thou dead within mine arms held fast, Hand locked in other's hand.               | 170 |
| "The ocean never to this day Gave up our baby dead: Ah, woe is me that life should stay, When all its sweet is fled!"                   | 175 |
| "Go down," said she, "to the seashore: God taketh ruth on thee: Search well; and I will come once more Ere yet the midnight be."        | 180 |
| She bent her sweet pale mouth to his:  The snowdrift from the sky Falls not so cold as did that kiss:  He shook as he should die.       |     |
| She looked on him with yearning eyes And vanished from his sight: He heard the matin cock crow thrice; The morning glimmered white.     | 185 |
| Then from his place he rose and sought The shore beside the sea: And there all day he searched; but nought                              | 190 |

Until the eve found he.

| At last a pale star glittered through The growing dusk of night And fell upon the waste of blue, A trembling wand of light. | 195 |
|---|-----|
| A trembling wand of light.  |     |
| And lo! a wondrous thing befell:  |     |
| As though the small star's ray  |     |
| Availed to break some year-old spell  | 200 |
| That on the water lay,  | 200 |
| A white form rose out of the deep,  |     |
| Where it so long had lain,  |     |
| Cradled within the cold death-sleep:  |     |
| He knew his babe again.   |     |
| It floated softly to his feet;  | 205 |
| White as a flower it lay:   |     |
| Christ's love had kept its body sweet   |     |
| Unravished of decay.  |     |
| He thanked God weeping for His grace;   |     |
| And many a tear he shed   | 210 |
| And many a kiss upon its face   |     |
| That smiled as do the dead.   |     |
| Then to the kirkyard where the maid   |     |
| Slept cold in clay he hied;   |     |
| And with a loving hand he laid  | 215 |
| The baby by her side.   |     |
| III.  |     |
| The dark fell down upon the earth;  |     |
| Night held the quiet air:   |     |
| He sat before the glowing hearth,   |     |
| Beside the empty chair.   | 220 |
| Twolve times at last for middle night   |     |
| Twelve times at last for middle night  Rang out the kirkyard bell:  |     |
| The state out the Kirkyara ben-   |     |

Ere yet the twelfth was silent quite,

By him sat Isobel.

| Within her arms their little child  Lay pillowed on her breast: | 225 |
|---|-----|
| Death seemed to it as soft and mild As heaven to the blest.     |     |
| Ah, no more wasted was her face,                                | 000 |
| Nor white her cheek and wan!                                    | 230 |
| The splendour of a heavenly grace                               |     |
| Upon her forehead shone.  |     |
| She seemed again the golden girl                                |     |
| Of the long-vanished years:                                     |     |
| Her face shone as a great sweet pearl,                          | 235 |
| Washed and made white in tears.                                 |     |
| The light of heaven filled her eyes                             |     |
| With soft and splendid flame;                                   |     |
| Out of the heart of Paradise                                    |     |
| It seemed as if she came.                                       | 240 |
| He looked upon her beauty bright;                               |     |
| And sore, sore sorrowed he,                                     |     |
| To think how many a day and night                               |     |
| Between them yet must be.                                       |     |
| He looked at her with many a sigh;                              | 245 |
| For sick he was with pain,                                      |     |
| To think how many a year must fly                               |     |
| Ere they two met again.   |     |
| She looked on him: no sadness lay                               |     |
| Upon her tender mouth;  | 250 |
| And syne she smiled, a smile as gay                             | _00 |
| And glad as in her youth.                                       |     |
|   |     |
| "Be of good cheer, dear heart," said she:                       |     |
| "Yet but a little year  |     |
| Ere thou and I together see                                     | 255 |
| The end of doubt and fear.                                      |     |

| "Come once again the saints' night ring  |     |
|--|-----|
| Unto the spirits' feet,                  |     |
| Glad with the end of sorrowing,          |     |
| Once more we three shall meet;           | 260 |
|  |     |
| "We three shall meet no more to part     |     |
| For all eternity:                        |     |
| 'Gin I come not to thee, sweetheart,     |     |
| Do thou come then to me."                |     |
|  |     |
| IV.                                      |     |
| Another year is past and gone:           | 265 |
| Once more the lingering light            |     |
| Fades from the sky and dusk falls down   |     |
| Upon the Holy Night.                     |     |
|  |     |
| The hearth is clear; the fire burns red; |     |
| The door stands open wide:               | 270 |
| He waits for the beloved dead            |     |
| To come with Hallow-tide.                |     |
|  |     |
| The midnight rings out loud and slow     |     |
| Across the frosty air:                   |     |
| He sits before the firelight-glow,       | 275 |
| Beside the waiting chair.                |     |
|  |     |
| The last chime dies into the night:      |     |
| The stillness grows apace:               |     |
| And yet there comes no lady bright       |     |
| To fill the empty place.                 | 280 |
|  |     |
| No soft hand falls upon his hair;        |     |
| No light breath fans his brow:           |     |
| The night is empty everywhere;           |     |
| The birds sleep on the bough.            |     |
|  |     |
| "Ah woe is me! the night fades fast;     | 285 |
| Her promise is forgot:                   |     |
| Alas!" he said, "the hours fly past,     |     |
| And still she cometh not!                |     |

| "So sweet she sleeps and sleeps with her The baby at her breast, No thought of earthly love can stir | 290   |
|--|-------|
| Their undesireful rest.  |       |
| "Ah, who can tell but Time may lay   |       |
| Betwixt us such a space  |       |
| That haply at the Judgment Day   | 295   |
| She will forget my face."  |       |
| The still night quivered as he spoke;  |       |
| He felt the midnight air   |       |
| Throb and a little breeze awoke  | 2.2.2 |
| Across the heather bare.   | 300   |
| And in the wind himseemed he heard   |       |
| His true love's voice once more:   |       |
| Afar it came, and but one word   |       |
| "Come!" unto him it bore.  |       |
| A faint hope flickered in his breast:  | 305   |
| He rose and took his way   |       |
| Where underneath the brown hill's crest  |       |
| The quiet kirkyard lay.  |       |
| He pushed the lychgate to the wall:  |       |
| Against the moonless sky   | 310   |
| The grey kirk towered dusk and tall:   |       |
| Heaven seemed on it to lie.  |       |
| Dead darkness held the holy ground;  |       |
| His feet went in and out   |       |
| And stumbled at each grassy mound,   | 315   |
| As one that is in doubt.   |       |
| Then suddenly the sky grew white;  |       |
| The moon thrust through the gloom:   |       |
| The tall tower's shade against her light   |       |
| Fell on his minnie's tomb.   | 320   |

| Full on her grave its shadow fell, As 'twere a giant's hand, That motionless the way doth tell  |     |
|---|-----|
| Unto the heavenly land.  He fell upon his knees thereby   | 325 |
| And kissed the holy earth, Wherein the only twain did lie That made life living-worth.  | 020 |
| He knelt; no longer did he weep; Great peace was on his soul: Sleep sank on him, a wondrous sleep, Assaining death and dole.            | 330 |
| And in the sleep himseemed he stood Before a high gold door, Upon whose midst the blessèd Rood Burnt like an opal's core.               | 335 |
| Christ shining on the cross to see Was there for all device: Within he saw the almond-tree That grows in Paradise.                      | 340 |
| He knew the fallen almond-flowers That drop without the gate, So with their scent the tardy hours Be cheered for those that wait.       |     |
| And as he looked, a glimmering light Shone through the blazoned bars: The wide tall gate grew blue and bright As Heaven with the stars. | 345 |
| A postern opened in his face; Sweet savours breathed about; And through the little open space A fair white hand came out:               | 350 |

A hand as white as ermolin,

A hand he knew full well, Beckoned to him to enter in -355 The hand of Isobel. Lord Christ, Thy morning tarrieth long: The shadows come and go: These three have heard the angels' song; Still many wait below. 360 These three on Heaven's honey feed And milk of Paradise: How long before for us indeed The hills of Heaven rise? How long before, joined hand-in-hand 365 With all the dear-loved dead, We pass along the heavenly land And hear the angels' tread? The night is long: the way is drear: Our hearts faint for the light: 370 Vouchsafe, dear Lord, the day draw near, The morning of Thy sight! (From The Poetical Works of John Payne. Vol. 2. London, 1902)