4 Glenara

O heard ye you pibroch sound sad in the gale, Where a band cometh slowly with weeping and wail? 'T is the chief of Glenara laments for his dear; And her sire, and the people, are called to her bier.

Glenara came first with the mourners and shroud;

Her kinsmen they followed, but mourned not aloud;

Their plaids all their bosoms were folded around;

They marched all in silence, — they looked on the ground.

In silence they reached over mountain and moor,

To a heath, where the oak-tree grew lonely and hoar.

"Now here let us place the gray stone of her cairn:

Why speak ye no word?" — said Glenara the stern.

"And tell me, I charge you! ye clan of my spouse,
Why fold ye your mantles, why cloud ye your brows?"
So spake the rude chieftain: — no answer is made,
But each mantle, unfolding, a dagger displayed.

"I dreamt of my lady, I dreamt of her shroud,"
Cried a voice from the kinsmen, all wrathful and loud:
"And empty that shroud and that coffin did seem:
Glenara, Glenara! now read me my dream!"

O! pale grew the cheek of that chieftain, I ween, When the shroud was unclosed, and no lady was seen; When a voice from the kinsmen spoke louder in scorn, — 'T was the youth who had loved the fair Ellen of Lorn:

"I dreamt of my lady, I dreamt of her grief,
I dreamt that her lord was a barbarous chief:
On a rock of the ocean fair Ellen did seem;
Glenara! Glenara! now read me my dream!"

In dust low the traitor has knelt to the ground, And the desert revealed where his lady was found; From a rock of the ocean that beauty is borne — Now joy to the house of fair Ellen of Lorn!
