Andrew Lang (1844-1912)

6 The Three Captains

| All beneath the white-rose tree          |     |
|--|-----|
| Walks a lady fair to see,                |     |
| She is as white as the snows,            |     |
| She is as fair as the day:               |     |
| From her father's garden close           | 5   |
| Three knights have ta'en her away.       |     |
| He has ta'en her by the hand,            |     |
| The youngest of the three —              |     |
| 'Mount and ride, my bonnie bride,        |     |
| On my white horse with me.'              | 10  |
|  |     |
| And ever they rode, and better rode,     |     |
| Till they came to Senlis town;           |     |
| The hostess she looked hard at them      |     |
| As they were lighting down.              |     |
| 'And are ye here by force,' she said,    | 15  |
| 'Or are ye here for play?'               |     |
| 'From out my father's garden close       |     |
| Three knights me stole away.             |     |
| (  |     |
| 'And fain would I win back,' she said,   | 0.0 |
| 'The weary way I come;                   | 20  |
| And fain would see my father dear,       |     |
| And fain go maiden home.'                |     |
| 'Oh, weep not, lady fair,' said she,     |     |
| 'You shall win back,' she said,          |     |
| 'For you shall take this draught from me | 25  |
| Will make you lie for dead.'             |     |
| 'Come in and sup, fair lady,' they said, |     |
| 'Come busk ye and be bright;             |     |
| It is with three bold captains           |     |
| it is with three bold captains           |     |

| That ye must be this night.'   | 30 |
|--|----|
| <ul><li>When they had eaten well and drunk,She fell down like one slain:</li><li>'Now, out and alas! for my bonnie mayShall live no more again.'</li></ul> |    |
| 'Within her father's garden steadThere are three white lilies;With her body to the lily bed,With her soul to Paradise.'                                  | 35 |
| They bore her to her father's house,They bore her all the three,They laid her in her father's close,Beneath the white-rose tree.                         | 40 |
| She had not lain a day, a day,A day but barely three,When the may awakes, 'Oh, open, father,Oh, open the door for me.                                    | 45 |
| "Tis I have lain for dead, father,Have lain the long days three,That I might maiden come againTo my mother and to thee."                                 | 50 |
| (From The Poetical Works of Andrew Lang. Vol. 3Ed. Mrs. Lang. London: Longmans, Green & Co.,1923)   | 3. |

1923)