Oscar Wilde (1856-1900)

2 The Ballad of Reading Gaol

Ι

He did not wear his scarlet coat,
For blood and wine are red,
And blood and wine were on his hands
When they found him with the dead,
The poor dead woman whom he loved,	5
And murdered in her bed.
He walked amongst the Trial Men
In a suit of shabby gray;
A cricket cap was on his head,
And his step seemed light and gay;	10
But I never saw a man who looked
So wistfully at the day.
I never saw a man who looked
With such a wistful eye
Upon that little tent of blue	15
Which prisoners call the sky,
And at every drifting cloud that went
With sails of silver by.
I walked with other souls in pain,
Within another ring,	20
And was wondering if the man had done
A great or little thing,
When a voice behind me whispered low,
'That fellow 's got to swing.'
Dear Christ! the very prison walls	25
Suddenly seemed to reel,
And the sky above my head became
Like a casque of scorching steel;
And, though I was a soul in pain,

My pain I could not feel.	30
I only knew what hunted thought Quickened his step, and why He looked upon the garish day With such a wistful eye;
The man had killed the thing he loved, And so he had to die.	35
Yet each man kills the thing he loves, By each let this be heard, Some do it with a bitter look,
Some with a flattering word,	40
The coward does it with a kiss,
The brave man with a sword!
Some kill their love when they are young, And some when they are old;
Some strangle with the hands of Lust,	45
Some with the hands of Gold: The kindest use a knife, because
The dead so soon grow cold.
Some love too little, some too long,
Some sell, and others buy;	50
Some do the deed with many tears,
And some without a sigh:
For each man kills the thing he loves,
Yet each man does not die.
He does not die a death of shame	55
On a day of dark disgrace,
Nor have a noose about his neck,
Nor a cloth upon his face,
Nor drop feet foremost through the floor Into an empty space.	60
into an ompoj opuco.	00
He does not sit with silent men
Who watch him night and day;
Who watch him when he tries to weep,
And when he tries to pray;

Who watch him lest himself should rob The prison of its prey.	65
He does not wake at dawn to see Dread figures throng his room, The shivering Chaplain robed in white, The Sheriff stern with gloom, And the Governor all in shiny black, With the yellow face of Doom.	70
He does not rise in piteous haste To put on convict-clothes, While some coarse-mouthed Doctor gloats, and notes Each new and nerve-twitched pose, Fingering a watch whose little ticks Are like horrible hammer-blows.	75
He does not know that sickening thirst That sands one's throat, before The hangman with his gardener's gloves Slips through the padded door, And binds one with three leathern thongs, That the throat may thirst no more.	80
He does not bend his head to hear The Burial Office read, Nor, while the terror of his soul Tells him he is not dead, Cross his own coffin, as he moves Into the hideous shed.	85 90
He does not stare upon the air Through a little roof of glass: He does not pray with lips of clay For his agony to pass; Nor feel upon his shuddering cheek The kiss of Caiaphas.	95

Π

Six weeks our guardsman walked the yard,

In the suit of shabby grey: His cricket cap was on his head, And his step seemed light and gay, But I never saw a man who looked So wistfully at the day.	100
I never saw a man who looked With such a wistful eye Upon that little tent of blue Which prisoners call the sky, And at every wandering cloud that trailed Its ravelled fleeces by.	105
He did not wring his hands, as do Those witless men who dare To try to rear the changeling Hope In the cave of black Despair: He only looked upon the sun, And drank the morning air.	110
He did not wring his hands nor weep, Nor did he peek or pine, But he drank the air as though it held Some healthful anodyne;	115
<ul><li>With open mouth he drank the sun As though it had been wine!</li><li>And I and all the souls in pain, Who tramped the other ring</li></ul>	120
Who tramped the other ring, Forgot if we ourselves had done A great or little thing, And watched with gaze of dull amaze The man who had to swing.	125
<ul><li>And strange it was to see him pass</li><li>With a step so light and gay,</li><li>And strange it was to see him look</li><li>So wistfully at the day,</li><li>And strange it was to think that he</li><li>Had such a debt to pay.</li></ul>	130

<ul> <li>For oak and elm have pleasant leaves That in the spring-time shoot:</li> <li>But grim to see is the gallows-tree, With its adder-bitten root,</li> <li>And, green or dry, a man must die Before it bears its fruit!</li> </ul>	135
<ul><li>The loftiest place is that seat of grace For which all worldlings try:</li><li>But who would stand in hempen band Upon a scaffold high,</li><li>And through a murderer's collar take His last look at the sky?</li></ul>	140
It is sweet to dance to violins When Love and Life are fair: To dance to flutes, to dance to lutes Is delicate and rare: But it is not sweet with nimble feet	145
To dance upon the air! So with curious eyes and sick surmise We watched him day by day, And wondered if each one of us Would end the self-same way, For none can tell to what red Hell His sightless soul may stray.	150 155
At last the dead man walked no more Amongst the Trial Men, And I knew that he was standing up In the black dock's dreadful pen, And that never would I see his face In God's sweet world again.	160
Like two doomed ships that pass in storm We had crossed each other's way: But we made no sign, we said no word, We had no word to say; For we did not meet in the holy night, But in the shameful day.	165

0

III

In Debtors' Yard the stones are hard, And the dripping wall is high, So it was there he took the air Beneath the leaden sky,	175
And by each side a Warder walked,
For fear the man might die.	180
Or else he sat with those who watched
His anguish night and day;
Who watched him when he rose to weep,
And when he crouched to pray;
Who watched him lest himself should rob	185
Their scaffold of its prey.
The Governor was strong upon
The Regulations Act:
The Doctor said that Death was but
A scientific fact:	190
And twice a day the Chaplain called,
And left a little tract.
And twice a day he smoked his pipe,
And drank his quart of beer:
His soul was resolute, and held	195
No hiding-place for fear;
He often said that he was glad
The hangman's hands were near.
But why he said so strange a thing
No Warder dared to ask:	200
For he to whom a watcher's doom

Is given as his task,
Must set a lock upon his lips,
And make his face a mask.
Or else he might be moved, and try	205
To comfort or console:
And what should Human Pity do
Pent up in Murderers' Hole?
What word of grace in such a place
Could help a brother's soul?	210
With slouch and swing around the ring
We trod the Fools' Parade!
We did not care: we knew we were
The Devil's Own Brigade:
And shaven head and feet of lead	215
Make a merry masquerade.
We tore the tarry rope to shreds
With blunt and bleeding nails;
We rubbed the doors, and scrubbed the floors,
And cleaned the shining rails:	220
And, rank by rank, we soaped the plank,
And clattered with the pails.
We sewed the sacks, we broke the stones,
We turned the dusty drill:
We banged the tins, and bawled the hymns,	225
And sweated on the mill:
But in the heart of every man
Terror was lying still.
So still it lay that every day
Crawled like a weed-clogged wave:	230
And we forgot the bitter lot
That waits for fool and knave,
Till once, as we tramped in from work,
We passed an open grave.
With yawning mouth the yellow hole	235
Gaped for a living thing;

The very mud cried out for blood To the thirsty asphalte ring: And we knew that ere one dawn grew fair Some prisoner had to swing.	240
Right in we went, with soul intent On Death and Dread and Doom: The hangman, with his little bag, Went shuffling through the gloom: And each man trembled as he crept Into his numbered tomb.	245
That night the empty corridors Were full of forms of Fear, And up and down the iron town Stole feet we could not hear, And through the bars that hide the stars White faces seemed to peer.	250
He lay as one who lies and dreams In a pleasant meadow-land, The watchers watched him as he slept, And could not understand How one could sleep so sweet a sleep With a hangman close at hand.	255
<ul> <li>But there is no sleep when men must weep Who never yet have wept:</li> <li>So we — the fool, the fraud, the knave — That endless vigil kept,</li> <li>And through each brain on hands of pain Another's terror crept.</li> </ul>	260
<ul><li>Alas! it is a fearful thing To feel another's guilt!</li><li>For, right within, the sword of Sin Pierced to its poisoned hilt,</li><li>And as molten lead were the tears we shed For the blood we had not spilt.</li></ul>	265 270

The Warders with their shoes of felt

Crept by each padlocked door, And peeped and saw, with eyes of awe, Grey figures on the floor, And wondered why men knelt to pray Who never prayed before.	275
<ul><li>All through the night we knelt and prayed, Mad mourners of a corse!</li><li>The troubled plumes of midnight were The plumes upon a hearse:</li><li>And bitter wine upon a sponge Was the savour of Remorse.</li></ul>	280
<ul> <li>The grey cock crew, the red cock crew, But never came the day:</li> <li>And crooked shapes of Terror crouched, In the corners where we lay:</li> <li>And each evil sprite that walks by night Before us seemed to play.</li> </ul>	285
<ul> <li>They glided past, they glided fast, Like travellers through a mist:</li> <li>They mocked the moon in a rigadoon Of delicate turn and twist,</li> <li>And with formal pace and loathsome grace The phantoms kept their tryst.</li> </ul>	290
<ul> <li>With mop and mow, we saw them go, Slim shadows hand in hand:</li> <li>About, about, in ghostly rout They trod a saraband:</li> <li>And the damned grotesques made arabesques, Like the wind upon the sand!</li> </ul>	295 300
<ul> <li>With the pirouettes of marionettes, They tripped on pointed tread:</li> <li>But with flutes of Fear they filled the ear, As their grisly masque they led,</li> <li>And loud they sang, and long they sang, For they sang to wake the dead.</li> </ul>	305

'Oho!' they cried, 'The world is wide, But fettered limbs go lame! And once, or twice, to throw the dice
Is a gentlemanly game,	310
But he does not win who plays with Sin In the secret House of Shame.'
No things of air these antics were,
That frolicked with such glee: To men whose lives were held in gyves,	315
And whose feet might not go free,	010
Ah! wounds of Christ! they were living things,
Most terrible to see.
Around, around, they waltzed and wound;
Some wheeled in smirking pairs;	320
With the mincing step of a demirep
Some sidled up the stairs: And with subtle sneer, and fawning leer,
Each helped us at our prayers.
The morning wind began to moan,	325
But still the night went on:
Through its giant loom the web of gloom Crept till each thread was spun:
And, as we prayed, we grew afraid
Of the Justice of the Sun.	330
The moaning wind went wandering round
The weeping prison-wall: Till like a wheel of turning steel
We felt the minutes crawl:
O moaning wind! what had we done	335
To have such a seneschal?
At last I saw the shadowed bars,
Like a lattice wrought in lead,
Move right across the whitewashed wall	0.40
That faced my three-plank bed, And I knew that somewhere in the world	340
God's dreadful dawn was red.

<ul><li>At six o'clock we cleaned our cells, At seven all was still,</li><li>But the sough and swing of a mighty wing The prison seemed to fill,</li><li>For the Lord of Death with icy breath Had entered in to kill.</li></ul>	345
<ul> <li>He did not pass in purple pomp, Nor ride a moon-white steed.</li> <li>Three yards of cord and a sliding board Are all the gallows' need:</li> <li>So with rope of shame the Herald came To do the secret deed.</li> </ul>	350
We were as men who through a fen Of filthy darkness grope: We did not dare to breathe a prayer, Or to give our anguish scope: Something was dead in each of us, And what was dead was Hope.	355 360
For Man's grim Justice goes its way And will not swerve aside: It slays the weak, it slays the strong, It has a deadly stride: With iron heel it slays the strong, The monstrous parricide!	365
<ul> <li>We waited for the stroke of eight:</li> <li>Each tongue was thick with thirst:</li> <li>For the stroke of eight is the stroke of Fate That makes a man accursed,</li> <li>And Fate will use a running noose For the best man and the worst.</li> </ul>	370
We had no other thing to do, Save to wait for the sign to come: So, like things of stone in a valley lone, Quiet we sat and dumb: But each man's heart beat thick and quick,	375

Like a madman on a drum!
<ul><li>With sudden shock the prison-clock Smote on the shivering air,</li><li>And from all the gaol rose up a wail Of impotent despair,</li><li>Like the sound that frightened marshes hear From some leper in his lair.</li></ul>	380
And as one sees most dreadful things In the crystal of a dream,	385
We saw the greasy hempen rope Hooked to the blackened beam,
And heard the prayer the hangman's snare	390
Strangled into a scream.	390
And all the woe that moved him so
That he gave that bitter cry, And the wild regrets, and the bloody sweats
None knew so well as I:
For he who lives more lives than one	395
More deaths than one must die.
IV
There is no chapel on the day
On which they hang a man:
The Chaplain's heart is far too sick,
Or his face is far too wan,	400
Or there is that written in his eyes Which none should look upon.
So they kept us close till nigh on noon,
And then they rang the bell,
And the Warders with their jingling keys	405
Opened each listening cell, And down the iron stair we tramped,
Each from his separate Hell.
Out into God's sweet air we went,
But not in wonted way,	410

For this man's face was white with fear, And that man's face was grey, And I never saw sad men who looked So wistfully at the day.
I never saw sad men who looked With such a wistful eye Upon that little tent of blue We prisoners called the sky,	415
And at every careless cloud that passed In happy freedom by.	420
But there were those amongst us all Who walked with downcast head, And knew that, had each got his due, They should have died instead: He had but killed a thing that lived, Whilst they had killed the dead.	425
<ul> <li>For he who sins a second time</li> <li>Wakes a dead soul to pain,</li> <li>And draws it from its spotted shroud,</li> <li>And makes it bleed again,</li> <li>And makes it bleed great gouts of blood,</li> <li>And makes it bleed in vain!</li> </ul>	430
Like ape or clown, in monstrous garb With crooked arrows starred, Silently we went round and round The slippery asphalte yard; Silently we went round and round, And no man spoke a word.	435
Silently we went round and round, And through each hollow mind The Memory of dreadful things Rushed like a dreadful wind, And Horror stalked before each man, And Terror crept behind.	440
The Warders strutted up and down,	445

And kept their herd of brutes, Their uniforms were spick and span, And they wore their Sunday suits, But we knew the work they had been at, By the quicklime on their boots.	450
For where a grave had opened wide, There was no grave at all: Only a stretch of mud and sand By the hideous prison-wall, And a little heap of burning lime,	455
That the man should have his pall. For he has a pall, this wretched man, Such as few men can claim: Deep down below a prison-yard,
Naked for greater shame, He lies, with fetters on each foot, Wrapt in a sheet of flame! And all the while the burning lime	460
Eats flesh and bone away, It eats the brittle bone by night, And the soft flesh by day, It eats the flesh and bone by turns, But it eats the heart alway.	465
<ul><li>For three long years they will not sow Or root or seedling there:</li><li>For three long years the unblessed spot Will sterile be and bare,</li><li>And look upon the wondering sky With unreproachful stare.</li></ul>	470
They think a murderer's heart would taint Each simple seed they sow. It is not true! God's kindly earth Is kindlier than men know, And the red rose would but blow more red,	475
The white rose whiter blow.	480

Out of his mouth a red, red rose! Out of his heart a white!
For who can say by what strange way,
Christ brings His will to light,	40 -
Since the barren staff the pilgrim bore Bloomed in the great Pope's sight?	485
But neither milk-white rose nor red
May bloom in prison air;
The shard, the pebble, and the flint,	100
Are what they give us there: For flowers have been known to heal	490
A common man's despair.
So never will wine-red rose or white,
Petal by petal, fall
On that stretch of mud and sand that lies	495
By the hideous prison-wall,
To tell the men who tramp the yard
That God's Son died for all.
Yet though the hideous prison-wall
Still hems him round and round,	500
And a spirit may not walk by night
That is with fetters bound,
And a spirit may but weep that lies
In such unholy ground,
Ho is at pages this wratched man	505
He is at peace — this wretched man — At peace, or will be soon:	505
There is no thing to make him mad,
Nor does Terror walk at noon,
For the lampless Earth in which he lies
Has neither Sun nor Moon.	510
They hanged him as a beast is hanged:
They did not even toll
A requiem that might have brought
Rest to his startled soul,
But hurriedly they took him out,	515
And hid him in a hole.

And gave him to the flies: They mocked the swollen purple throat, And the stark and staring eyes: And with laughter loud they heaped the shroud In which their convict lies.	520
The Chaplain would not kneel to pray
By his dishonoured grave: Nor mark it with that blessed Cross	525
That Christ for sinners gave,	929
Because the man was one of those
Whom Christ came down to save.
Yet all is well; he has but passed
To life's appointed bourne:	530
And alien tears will fill for him
Pity's long-broken urn,
For his mourners will be outcast men,
And outcasts always mourn.
V
I know not whether Laws be right,	535
I know not whether Laws be right, Or whether Laws be wrong;	535
_	535
Or whether Laws be wrong;	535
Or whether Laws be wrong; All that we know who lie in gaol	535
Or whether Laws be wrong; All that we know who lie in gaol Is that the wall is strong;	535 540
Or whether Laws be wrong; All that we know who lie in gaol Is that the wall is strong; And that each day is like a year, A year whose days are long.
Or whether Laws be wrong; All that we know who lie in gaol Is that the wall is strong; And that each day is like a year, A year whose days are long. But this I know, that every Law
Or whether Laws be wrong; All that we know who lie in gaol Is that the wall is strong; And that each day is like a year, A year whose days are long. But this I know, that every Law That men have made for Man,
Or whether Laws be wrong; All that we know who lie in gaol Is that the wall is strong; And that each day is like a year, A year whose days are long. But this I know, that every Law
Or whether Laws be wrong; All that we know who lie in gaol Is that the wall is strong; And that each day is like a year, A year whose days are long. But this I know, that every Law That men have made for Man, Since first Man took his brother's life,
Or whether Laws be wrong; All that we know who lie in gaol Is that the wall is strong; And that each day is like a year, A year whose days are long. But this I know, that every Law That men have made for Man, Since first Man took his brother's life, And the sad world began,	540

Is built with bricks of shame, And bound with bars lest Christ should see How men their brothers maim.	550
With bars they blur the gracious moon, And blind the goodly sun: And they do well to hide their Hell, For in it things are done	555
That Son of God nor son of Man Ever should look upon!
The vilest deeds like poison weeds, Bloom well in prison-air; It is only what is good in Man That wastes and withers there: Pale Anguish keeps the heavy gate, And the Warder is Despair.	560
For they starve the little frightened child Till it weeps both night and day: And they scourge the weak, and flog the fool, And gibe the old and grey, And some grow mad, and all grow bad,	565
And none a word may say. Each narrow cell in which we dwell Is a foul and dark latrine,	570
<ul><li>And the fetid breath of living Death Chokes up each grated screen,</li><li>And all, but Lust, is turned to dust In Humanity's machine.</li></ul>	575
The brackish water that we drink Creeps with a loathsome slime, And the bitter bread they weigh in scales Is full of chalk and lime, And Sleep will not lie down, but walks Wild-eyed, and cries to Time.	580
But though lean Hunger and green Thirst Like asp with adder fight,

We have little care of prison fare, For what chills and kills outright Is that every stone one lifts by day Becomes one's heart by night.	585
<ul> <li>With midnight always in one's heart, And twilight in one's cell,</li> <li>We turn the crank, or tear the rope, Each in his separate Hell,</li> <li>And the silence is more awful far Than the sound of a brazen bell.</li> </ul>	590
And never a human voice comes near To speak a gentle word: And the eye that watches through the door Is pitiless and hard:	595
<ul><li>And by all forgot, we rot and rot,</li><li>With soul and body marred.</li><li>And thus we rust Life's iron chain</li><li>Degraded and alone:</li></ul>	600
And some men curse, and some men weep, And some men make no moan: But God's eternal Laws are kind And break the heart of stone.	605
<ul> <li>And every human heart that breaks, In prison-cell or yard,</li> <li>Is as that broken box that gave Its treasure to the Lord,</li> <li>And filled the unclean leper's house With the scent of costliest nard.</li> </ul>	610
<ul><li>Ah! happy they whose hearts can break And peace of pardon win!</li><li>How else may man make straight his plan And cleanse his soul from Sin?</li><li>How else but through a broken heart May Lord Christ enter in?</li></ul>	615

And he of the swollen purple throat,

And the stark and staring eyes,	620
Waits for the holy hands that took
The Thief to Paradise;
And a broken and a contrite heart
The Lord will not despise.
The man in red who reads the Law	625
Gave him three weeks of life,
Three little weeks in which to heal
His soul of his soul's strife,
And cleanse from every blot of blood
The hand that held the knife.	630
And with tears of blood he cleansed the hand,
The hand that held the steel:
For only blood can wipe out blood,
And only tears can heal:
And the crimson stain that was of Cain	635
Because Christ's snow-white seal.
VI
In Reading goal by Reading town
There is a pit of shame,
And in it lies a wretched man
Eaten by teeth of flame,	640
In a burning winding-sheet he lies,
And his grave has got no name.
And there, till Christ call forth the dead,
In silence let him lie:
No need to waste the foolish tear,	645
Or heave the windy sigh:
The man had killed the thing he loved,
And so he had to die.
And all men kill the thing they love,
By all let this be heard,	650
Some do it with a bitter look,
Some with a flattering word,
The coward does it with a kiss,

The brave man with a sword!

1898

(From Poems by Oscar Wilde, with the Ballad of Reading Gaol. London: Methuen & Co., 1908)